'Top-level' acts.

Ottawa's largest music fest spills the beans to Metro about its lineup

SEAN

sean.mckibbin@metronews.ca

A lot of people in Ottawa just like to listen to music they love and have a good time, but they all like a lot of different music, and the man in charge of Ottawa's Bluesfest says it's all coming together earlier this year than usual.

"It's always nice when it comes together," said Bluesfest executive director Mark Monahan in an interview with Metro ahead of the official Wednesday announcement of headlining acts. "I think I've got a pretty good mix of top-level arena acts like Rush and Zac Brown and Dixie Chicks, with some current leading-edge acts."

There's a robust collection of what Monahan searchingly describes as "alt indie pop" that makes up that leading edge — acts like She and Him and Belle and Sebastian, or Sharon Van Etten. Others certain to jump out to Ottawa's younger crowd are Stars, The Cat Empire and Grace Potter & the Nocturnals.

Monahan also points to blues great B.B. King playing the festival for the first year and other solid blues acts such as Ronnie Earl & the Broadcasters and Larry McCray to cement the festival's blues credentials.

Monahan, who has to take the pulse of Ottawa's musical tastes and translate it into the region's biggest music festival — this year running from July 4 to 14 — says he always tries to reflect what's happening in the current year and at the same time not lose sight of the fact Ottawa is "very much a classic-rock town."

"People like to go out and have a good time and they love to see the Hip every second year," he said. "I'm not trying to be a Coachella or an Osh-eaga or a Bonnaroo or some destination festival. I've got to do something that people in Ottawa are going to enjoy and want to come out to every year because it's not a one-off thing."

Tickets for the festival go on sale Thursday at 10 a.m. with pricing discounts available until Saturday. Check metronews.ca for full details of the lineup.

Concrete progress

Lansdowne redevelopment on track: Mayor

Mayor Jim Watson and city councillors toured Lansdowne Park Tuesday to check up on its ongoing reconstruction.

The group inspected the south stands where the main floor and beams are being poured and the foundations are complete, ongoing work on the roof of the north side stands and the first section of a new underground parking garage.

Contractors are using an on-site mobile concrete plant that will produce enough concrete to fill 65 Olympic-sized swimming pools over the course of construction. The plant decreases truck traffic on area roads and helps to reduce the fuel consumption of vehicles transporting concrete, equivalent to removing the emissions of over 400 cars per day.

Terraced 'ziggurat'

Iraq proposes a major embassy redesign

The city's planning committee approved an application Tuesday to demolish the Iraqi embassy at 215 McLeod Street and replace it with new four-storey design of glass and steel.

The current two-storey building, completed in 1957, is guarded by a metal fence and security hut.

The new embassy building, an irregular-shaped terraced "ziggurat," is to feature a formal main entrance and will replace the current fenced-in surface parking lot with underground parking. Both moves are identified in a city report as "positive contributions" to the streetscape. STEVE COLLINS/METRO

NBL, NASL. Controversy over basketball name followed by yawn over soccer team adopting same old namesake

joe.lofaro@metronews.ca

Within a few hours of each other, two Ottawa sports teams' names were announced Tuesday, but one was met with a bit of controversy.

Gus Takkale, head of Bytown Sports & Entertainment Inc., unveiled Ottawa's professional basketball team name — the Ottawa TomaHawks — and logo at a press conference Tuesday afternoon at city hall.

The team will join the National Basketball League of Canada (NBL), which was formed in May 2011.

The announcement stirred a bit of controversy with some people who said the name is offensive to First Nations.

Sports teams, both amateur and professional, have long faced similar criticism for references to First Nations peoples in their names and logos.

Last summer, the Nepean Redskins football team name was labelled racist by many in the community, including A Tribe Called Red's Ian Campeau. Campeau led an unsuccessful campaign to have the name changed and challenged Coun. Jan Harder to get involved.

At Tuesday's announcement, Takkale said he consulted with First Nations groups before deciding on the name.

"There's no native intentional reference at all," said Takkale, adding that the tomahawk dunk is a historical symbol of basketball made famous by many professional players in the game.

The evening saw John Pugh, president of the North American Soccer League (NASL), pull the curtain on Ottawa's new soccer team's name: the Ottawa Fury FC.

The team is expected to play its first game once the Lansdowne Park redevelopment project wraps up in 2014. The team is owned by the Ottawa Sports and Entertainment Group.

Pugh said he is starting a campaign in the coming weeks for soccer fans to help

Tourists bathed in fire in most lethal balloon accident on record

Egypt. At least 19 dead, with two others suffering severe burns

A hot-air balloon carrying tourists over Egypt's ancient city of Luxor caught fire Tuesday, and some passengers trying to escape the flames leaped to their deaths before the craft crashed in a sugar-cane field. At least 19 tourists were killed in what is believed to be the world's deadliest ballooning accident.

The accident was a new blow to Egypt's tourism industry, which has been gutted by the country's turmoil the past two years.

The crash raised accusations that authorities have let safety standards fall amid the political instability, though the civil aviation chief insisted his ministry keeps stringent inspections.

The balloon was carrying 20 tourists — from France, Britain, Belgium, Hungary, Japan and Hong Kong — and an Egyptian pilot on a flight over Luxor, officials said.

"I saw tourists catching fire, and they were jumping from the balloon. They were trying to flee the fire, but it was on their bodies," said Hassan Abdel-Rasoul, a farmer in al-Dhabaa. He said one of those he saw on fire was a visibly pregnant woman.

Bodies of the dead tourists were scattered across the field.

The crash immediately killed 18, according to Luxor's governor, Ezzat Saad.

Two Britons and the Egyptian pilot were taken to the hospital, but one of the Britons died of his injuries soon after. The other Briton and the Egyptian, who state media said suffered severe burns, were flown to Cairo for further treatment.

The Department of Foreign Affairs in Ottawa says the Canadian Embassy in Cairo has confirmed that no Canadians have been affected.

The balloon was landing when a cable got caught around a helium tube and a fire erupted, according to an investigator with the state prosecutor's office.

Pistorius's testimony may damn him on lesser charge

Even if Oscar Pistorius is acquitted of murder, firearms and legal experts in South Africa believe that, by his own account, the star athlete violated gun-handling regulations and exposed himself to a homicide charge by shooting into a closed door without knowing who was behind it.

Pistorius testified that he shot at the door, fearing but not knowing for certain that an intruder was on the other side. Instead, it was Pistorius' girlfriend, Reeva Steenkamp.

Prosecutors charged Pistorius with premeditated murder, saying the shooting followed an argument between the two.

South Africa has stringent laws regulating the use of lethal force for self-protection. In order to get a firearm permit, applicants must not only know those rules but must demonstrate proficiency with the weapon and knowledge of its safe handling, making it far tougher to legally own a gun than in many other countries.

"There is no situation in South Africa that allows a person to shoot at a threat that is not identified," said Andre Pretorius, president of the Professional Firearm Trainers Council, a regulatory body for firearms instructors. "It could have been a minor — a 15-year-old kid, a 12-year-old kid — breaking in to get food."

Experts said that even if the prosecution fails to prove premeditated murder, firing several shots through a closed door could bring a conviction for the charge of culpable homicide, an equivalent to manslaughter covering unintentional deaths through negligence. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pistorius plans memorial

Oscar Pistorius planned a personal memorial service on Tuesday for Reeva Steenkamp.

The service would be at the home of his uncle Arnold, where the athlete has been staying since he was released on bail.

Pistorius's reputation-management firm said he had requested the service "as he remains in deep mourning for the loss of his partner Reeva."

Alleged assault by Sen. Patrick Brazeau detailed in warrant

A search warrant filed in court says an ongoing argument over aboriginal issues at the home of Sen. Patrick Brazeau escalated into a physical and sexual confrontation.

The police warrant details allegations by a woman in Brazeau's home who says he punched her, choked her, tore her pants off and pushed her down a flight of stairs, breaking the railing.

The complainant also alleges Brazeau aggressively grabbed her breast and another area of her body, called her vulgar names, spit in her face, and tore up a bra and blouse she was trying to pack in a suitcase.

Court documents say Brazeau, 38, has formally pleaded not guilty to charges of assault and sexual assault.

None of the allegations have been proven in court.

Never mind horsemeat — in South Africa, mystery beef includes donkey

Misrepresented meat.
New study found 68 per cent of samples contained species not declared on label

Worried about horsemeat in your beef? Try water buffalo, donkey and goat. South African food scientists said they have found all three in mislabelled foods including beef burgers, ground beef and sausages.

A study published by three professors at Stellenbosch University found that 68 per cent of 139 samples contained species not declared on the product label, with the highest incidence in sausages, burger patties and deli meats.

The study found soya and gluten were not labelled in 28 per cent of products tested and found undeclared pork in 37 per cent and chicken in 23 per cent.

iTunes. Apple settlement to award $100M in credits

Apple has agreed to give more than $100 million in iTunes-store credits to settle a lawsuit alleging that the iPhone and iPad maker improperly charged kids for playing games on their mobile devices.

The two-year-old case centres on allegations that Apple didn't create adequate parental controls to prevent children from buying extra features while playing free games on iPhones and iPads in 2010 and 2011.

Parents who filed the lawsuit in 2011 said they didn't realize their children were racking up the charges until they received bills or other notifications after the purchases were made. The games that had been downloaded were designed for kids as young as four years old, according to the lawsuit.

Apple introduced more stringent controls governing in-game purchases as part of a March 2011 update to the software that runs its mobile devices. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oversharing financial information is putting young Canadians at risk

Many young Canadians are oversharing their financial information, says a new survey that found nearly half of 18- to 34-year-old respondents admitting they take risks like texting their credit- or debit-card numbers.

The poll by Visa Canada found that 45 per cent of this demographic group also shared their payment card information via email, loaned their cards and didn't keep their PIN confidential.

This behaviour mirrors similar habits of sharing personal information on social-media sites, said Gord Jamieson, head of payment system risk at the credit-card company. "Yet they're really not totally aware of who has access to this information and who else can be seeing this information and what would be done with it," he said.

The survey, released Tuesday, marks the start of fraud-prevention month in March.

Coincidence? Likely not

43%

The survey found that 43 per cent of those who engaged in behaviour such as sharing payment card information or loaning their card had experienced some kind of fraud.

Individuals in the 18 to 34 group also reported the highest level of online sharing activities, including keeping an open profile on a social-network site and posting to it daily, publicly sharing photos and posting their employment history. "Just be careful what you put out there," Jamieson said, noting that public Wi-Fi networks for mobile devices aren't necessarily secure.

Older generations tend not to overshare quite as much. Among those aged 35 and older, the survey found that 32 per cent reported taking risks with their payment card information. THE CANADIAN PRESS

LISTEN UP, LANGUAGE POLICE

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

Le gouvernement du Québec is in trouble because its overzealous language police tried to ban the word "pasta" from the menu of an Italian restaurant.

"Pâtes" doesn't quite have the same ring, but it's all part of a legitimate effort to preserve the French language in the face of creeping ... Italian.

Of course, the story went viral and now le gouvernement is calling off les chiens.

Trying to write in both official languages is exhausting. So I'm stopping. Maintenant, er, now.

The point is that taking care of the language is a thankless task. We should worry less about giving our francophone cousins a tough time about their vigilance and concentrate on our own English-language transgressions, which are légion.

New linguistic tack

The ultimate tipoff that you're dealing with a suspected language violator is "tact," which actually means "diplomacy," but is often used as a word meaning "tactic" or "approach."

In fact, Quebec has given me a good idea. I'm going to assemble my own language police and send violation notices by Twitter, which should make me even more popular than usual.

The hardest thing is where to start. If we ban the use of the word "like" except in its proper context, that is: "I like ice cream," an entire generation will be struck dumb. Same with other ubiquitous language shrapnel such as "Oh, my God" and "awesome," which is not.

As bad as those are, they're nothing compared to the battery of baloney designed to make the user appear smarter or more well-read. Regardez: "Irregardless," which is a faux gilding of the lily known as "regardless."

The ultimate tipoff that you're dealing with a suspected language violator is "tact," which actually means "diplomacy," but is often used as a word meaning "tactic" or "approach." Tact is short for tactic, no? The shortest distance between two ideas?

No. The actual term is "tack," which is a nautical term for an effective way to make forward progress into a headwind. Once you've learned to tack, you'll never go back. But we need to deal sternly with all those clever tacticians if we're to make any headway.

The biggest challenge for my new Grammar Gendarmes, I predict, will be jargon, which is a mélange (stop that!) of acronyms and catchy phrases that make the offender sound as if he's speaking Esperanto from a script by Steve Jobs.

For example: "POTUS will do his due diligence and nominate from within his own wheelhouse for the next SCOTUS vacancy." Even l'office québécois de la langue française would have trouble figuring out if that's English, Italian or Klingon. That's punditry gone wild, and should read: "After careful consideration, the U.S. president will nominate a political ally to fill the next vacancy on the Supreme Court."

America is suffering from a language recession and may be a lost cause. But ici Canada, we still maintiens le droit. Vive la difference!

A giant leap of fate

ULET IFANASTI/GETTY IMAGES

Ancient tradition

Boys become men in stone jumping

You'd call it a leap of faith, but for youngsters in rural Indonesia, it's more a leap of their fate.

In Orahili Fau village, Nias Island, some 1,200 kilometres northwest of Jakarta, young men take part in stone jumping, "fahombo batu," a manhood ritual of leaping over stone towers — a feat which in the past has resulted in serious injury and death. METRO

Stone tradition

Nias Island is last megalithic culture

The island of Nias, dominated by mountainous terrain and ravines, has been described as having one of the world's last megalithic cultures.

Until the 1950s, locals would erect monoliths, "owasa," used for ceremonies. Experts have never found stone-jumping sites elsewhere in Indonesia, pointing to the island's uniqueness in the megalithic tradition. METRO metres is the height of this column. The intrepid youth, dressed in traditional warrior garb, run up and hop on a small, round stone to gain momentum and height before soaring feet first over the block. In the past, the block was topped with sharpened bamboo stakes. The centuries-old practice of stone jumping first began when intertribal wars were rife. Every valiant fighter would be able to leap over the high stone walls of a rival village, fringed with bamboo stakes across the top.

Size of the stone

Past traditions gone

Count number of jumps, not heads

In traditional Nias society, "mangani binu" (decapitation of enemies) was a principal ritual for young men.

Nowadays, instead of the number of skulls a person acquired determining one's social status, it is based on how many stones could be jumped over. But the use of traditional weapons in local ceremonies is a reminder of this ritual. METRO

Miles Teller draws the line at French kissing

21 & Over. Star had difficult time agreeing to some scenes in new movie

Metro World News in Hollywood

Miles Teller insists he's generally game for anything once he's signed on to a film, but as he learned on 21 & Over — the directorial debut of The Hangover writers Jon Lucas and Scott Moore — there were some lengths to which Teller wasn't quite willing to go for the sake of comedy.

Diving right into the nudity issue, there are a few very bold scenes for you in this. How do you psyche yourself up for that?

Or not. I mean, I know when you read the script or agree to do a movie, you know you're going to agree to do everything. The nudity stuff, I just made sure I worked out, you know what I mean? Because some movies you don't have time. You can work out before a movie, but then when you're shooting there's really no time. I know some actors do it, and people should really give them credit because they're working 14 hours a day, it's exhausting, and then working out and getting like five hours of sleep. It's pretty tough. So for this I just made sure I worked out, and the (guy-on-guy) kissing scene was something I tried to get rid of for a while. I was literally like pretty upset about that. And then we did it and it was just like CPR.

You were upset about it?

Kiss a guy? Yes. Inevitably, I did it for comedy. But they wanted me to use the tongue and I said, "Nope. It's not that funny, man."

These guys are known for going pretty far for a joke. Was there anything else where you had to draw the line?

No. I mean, there was a point where me and Skylar were shackled up and were getting spanked. At one point the shackle broke, so I had to bend over and fix it and s—, and there was all these girls around, and I was just like, "I'm sorry about some a—hole." Then I just went down and fixed it. Other than that, I felt pretty safe. The humour that these guys write, they're both extremely intelligent. And it's funny, it's well-written, it's not, like, dumb comedy. I never felt like I was doing cheesy or manipulative stuff. I felt pretty comfortable with everything.

What's your own most dramatic drinking anecdote?

I just remember the only time I had alcohol poisoning, when I was literally puking black, and I was just like, "This is bad." Nothing black should ever come out of your body, you know what I mean? Especially out of your mouth. There's some crazier s— I'm sure, but if you remember it then it probably wasn't that good.

How did your own college experience compare to this?

Not at all. I mean, NYU is just, like, New York. I mean, New York is your college campus, and when I was in college I smoked a lot of weed and played a lot of FIFA. That was pretty much what I did. But I grew up in Florida. Florida State's a pretty stereotypical party college. Anywhere in the South, anywhere in the sun with a college with a good sports team is going to be fun.

21 and Over

Birthdays are universal

Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

Paris Hilton once said, "The way I see it, you should live everyday like it's your birthday." Of course she would think that way. She's young. And rich.

Like death and taxes, birthdays are one of the events that touch everyone's lives. Not everyone loves to celebrate getting older — "There is still no cure for the common birthday," said John Glenn — but Hollywood seems to enjoy throwing birthday parties — on screen at least. This weekend in 21 & Over a med school student makes merry on his birthday with two of his besties. But like so many movie birthday parties it goes horribly wrong — or horribly right if you have a taste for humiliation, extreme drunkenness and debauchery.

Horror movies have frequently used birthday parties as a backdrop for terror. The alien invasion movie Signs made Bravo's 100 Scariest Movie Moments list for a scene showing news footage of an alien at a child's birthday party in Brazil.

The film Logan's Run is set in an idyllic future. There's just one huge drawback — on your 21st birthday you will be vaporized into a sticky goo during a ritual called the Carousel.

Not all movie birthdays are bummers, however.

Despite hiring a drunken clown to perform at his nephew Miles's (Macaulay Culkin) birthday, Uncle Buck, played by the late, great John Candy, does the best he can to throw a great birthday party. The best part? He makes giant pancakes — they're so extreme they now have their own Facebook page with 290 likes — boasting, "You should see the toast. I couldn't even get it through the door!"

Nicholas Hoult is having some Giant success

Nicholas Hoult has already had plenty of success this year with last month's zombie rom-com, Warm Bodies, but now he's on to a much bigger adventure as Jack in Jack the Giant Slayer, director Bryan Singer's take on the classic tale. Plus, he has another little comic book movie with Singer lined up next.

When you finally get a horse-riding role, it's one of those signs that you've made it.

I don't know if I've necessarily made it, but it's very cool to be a part of a film of this scale. People often say they can ride a horse even when they can't, even when they've never sat on a horse in their life. It's just a given. You read anyone's C.V. and it will say that they can ride a horse. And then if they get a horse-riding role then they'll panic and try and learn to ride quickly.

Congratulations on the success of Warm Bodies. Have you noticed any palpable changes in your life now that you have a hit movie out?

Not particularly. To be honest with you, that weekend I went down to Africa to start shooting a film down there and then got back yesterday morning, so I was kind of kept out of it a little bit.

You're going back to work with Bryan Singer again with X-Men: Days of Future Past.

He's a really talented director and really knowledgeable about film, and can really break down stories and characters and understands how to move a story forward at all times. He's fantastic in the X-Men world, really understands it. I haven't spoken to him in-depth about this next one yet, but I know he's really excited about it, and that's a great sign. I'm looking forward to playing that role again.

The new film seems to mix actors from different time periods of the franchise, like Ian McKellan and Ellen Page, then you and Jennifer Lawrence. Are you giving much thought to how you'll be interacting with them yet?

You know what, the odd thing was it was fantastic doing our version, First Class, but suddenly this time when I heard that Hugh Jackman and Ian McKellan and Patrick Stewart and those guys were coming back and that I was going to be in it, it suddenly became a much more real X-Men film in many ways — as much as ours did when we were doing it, we were all new to it and it was a different time and take on it. So to be part of one of the films with all those characters is going to be really exciting for me as a fan.

Big Brother gets a Canadian sibling

Reality TV. Franchise stays true to classic formula, but with a few Canuck twists

As the guests move into the camera-rigged house of Big Brother Canada, executive producer John Brunton is already predicting a breakout star: 21-year-old funky fashion stylist Gary Levy.

The outspoken reality show guru touted a diverse cast of off-the-wall Canucks seeking fame and a modest fortune on the inaugural season of the homegrown spinoff starting Wednesday, singling out the Toronto contender as one to watch.

"Gary is a superstar," Brunton gushed in a recent interview after 15 house guests were announced.

"I'll make a prediction: I predict that Gary is going to have a gigantic career after he leaves the Big Brother house, whenever that might be. That guy is 100 per cent original. He is delightful."

Levy describes himself as "funky, outgoing, fabulous" in an online biography for the Big Brother Canada website. He says his strategy is to "be really social and friendly" so that he can get information on his rivals and possibly use that against them.

His competitors include 27-year-old dental hygienist Emerald (Topaz) Brady of Toronto, 26-year-old web content curator Peter Brown of Surrey, B.C., and 36-year-old Suzette Amaya of Vancouver, who also caught Brunton's eye.

The aboriginal cast member is a mother of three who bills herself as "outgoing, thoughtful and funny" and "an uber fan" of the franchise. Brunton simply describes her as "somebody who really blows my mind. She just ticks off so many boxes in the 'good person' department."

"But she's

Canadian, eh?

Comparisons to the popular U.S. version of the show are inevitable.

- There will be classic challenges from the franchise, as well as challenges that are "very Canadian," according to executive producer John Brunton.

- "There is going to be an enormous amount of Canadian flavour, just by the nature of the people that we put in that house," he says.

not in any way what some people might assume to be ... a person who's grown up on a reservation and come off it. She just breaks all stereotypes."

Whether such nice-guy attributes will be a help or hindrance has yet to be seen.

The franchise — based on the original Dutch series Big Brother — sends house guests packing after weekly physical and intellectual competitions. But it's the sometimes explosive personality clashes that often seal a contender's fate.

Canada's inaugural batch of house guests have plenty of personality, but Shaw Media boss Barbara Williams says they weren't necessarily cast for their potential to cause drama. "It was much more about the magnetism that someone just projects, who has just real presence in a room," says Williams.

The Canucks crew is notably young — 12 of the 15 house guests are in their 20s.

The youngest is 20-year-old aspiring actress Danielle Alexander of Calgary, a former competitive gymnast who says she's confident she can handle the physical challenges. The oldest is 38-year-old Andrew Monaghan of Halifax, an insurance sales trainer who says he plans to hide his age.

- Viewers will also have the chance to affect what happens on the show online. And footage from the house will be streamed 24-hours-a-day for free at bigbrothercanada.ca.

- Shaw Media boss Barbara Williams says it's time Canada put its mark on the global franchise, which aired 25 formats in 87 countries in 2011 and continues to expand into new territories.

Brunton says the group is nonetheless culturally, economically and regionally diverse. "You've got people that are still living with their moms and dads, maybe longer than they should, and you've got other people that are out in the world at a very young age trying to crack it and make it in a big competitive world."

Of course, the moment they enter the house contenders can pretend to be whoever they want — lying, back-stabbing and deal-making have become staple strategies in other incarnations.

The grand prize is $100,000, a $25,000 gift card for The Brick and a Chevrolet Trax. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Show times

Big Brother Canada debuts Wednesday on Slice and Global.

- Hosted by Arisa Cox, the series will regularly air Wednesdays, Thursdays and Sundays on Slice.
- Big Brother Canada After Dark also debuts Wednesday on Slice. It airs seven days a week from 2 a.m. to 5 a.m. ET.

Actor turns vain, oversexed character into fan favourite

New Girl. TV show took a chance with over-the-top Schmidt, but Max Greenfield has won over fans and earned award nominations

Max Greenfield, who's been nominated for an Emmy and a Golden Globe for his role as Schmidt on the Fox comedy New Girl, says he isn't worried about being typecast.

The idea makes him laugh. "I don't think anybody was ever going to put me in Winter's Bone anyway," the 32-year-old actor said. "You know what I mean? I don't think if they were making a very dramatic, serious movie, they were going to think, 'You know, I really like Max Greenfield, but Schmidt is just ... it's too much of a THING to put him in that movie.'"

New Girl stars Zooey Deschanel as a young woman with three male roommates, played by Greenfield, Jake Johnson and Lamorne Morris.

Schmidt is a vain, oversexed ladies' man with obsessive-compulsive disorder. He makes frequent references to his Jewish heritage. The character could be unlikable, but Greenfield's portrayal of Schmidt makes many viewers root for him.

Fans tweet Greenfield's lines while the show airs. And Greenfield garners respect from his peers. "I want to live in a world where the only person I see or interact with is Schmidt," actress Mindy Kaling tweeted last year. Gwyneth Paltrow wrote in her newsletter, GOOP, that she "fell in TV love" with the character. Greenfield now occasionally contributes to GOOP.

Greenfield worried before New Girl debuted in 2011 that viewers would dislike Schmidt.

"I thought, 'There's a good chance that I'll never work again after this.' I mean, we've played him in such a way that this could go terribly wrong, and then we started to air and the response was so positive. It kind of affirmed all the things that the writers were doing, all the things that I was doing. I think it said to everyone, 'We're on the same page. We can keep moving forward.' And then they just went crazy with it."

Schmidt's first name hasn't been revealed, and Greenfield hopes it never will be, unless it's done in a clever way, like if the character gets married.

"I'm just thinking of this now, but what a smart move this would be. 'Will you (first name) Schmidt take ...' and that's the moment she goes, 'That's your first name?' That would be a nice moment. Under a chuppah."

Lohan looking to change her ways — no, really

It may be a case of too little too late, but Lindsay Lohan is reportedly looking to change her ways — and her lawyer is asking for her current probation violation case to be delayed so that she can do just that, according to TMZ.

Her new attorney, Mark Heller, has asked for a continuance, arguing that Lohan “is pursuing and participating in certain activities which will benefit her and afford her more of an opportunity to be a productive and responsible person and contributor to society,” court documents reveal. The documents further state that Lohan “has made a commitment to herself to elevate her life and participate in activities which will advance her desire to lead a model life.”

Hathaway just wants to be as likeable as possible

She may have won an Oscar this week, but that doesn't mean Anne Hathaway is immune to criticism.

“It does get to me,” Hathaway said of the snipes directed at her after winning the award Sunday.

“But you have to remember that there's a positive to every negative and a negative to every positive.”

And a source tells Us Weekly that Hathaway was even looking to head-off her critics before the big awards show by practising her acceptance speech to make sure she came off as likeable as possible. “She was very aware that she had been the butt of everyone's jokes,” a source says.

MacFarlane keeps on entertaining

Apparently Seth MacFarlane didn't get his need to perform out of his system at the Oscars Sunday night, as the host also took the stage for a few numbers at his private after-party in front of family and friends, according to E! News.

He also celebrated the night by getting cosy with Charlize Theron. “Charlize was very chatty with Seth and they shared a laugh in between his performances,” a source says. “The party wasn't packed, but everyone seemed to be enjoying the singing and dancing.”

Theron reportedly stayed at the shindig for quite a while. METRO WORLD NEWS

His memorable opening song

Maybe you found Oscar host Seth MacFarlane hilarious or offensive or neither or both. Either way, you surely remember his opening number, We Saw Your Boobs. In the song, he called out Meryl Streep, Anne Hathaway and other notable actresses for showing their stuff (including Jodie Foster in the rape movie The Accused — ha-ha Seth?).

Celebrity porn website Mr. Skin has now collected clips from every film mentioned. Good marketing! Timely! Gross? METRO

Once is more than enough

It looks like it's one and done at the Oscars for Seth MacFarlane. The Family Guy creator was asked on his Twitter account whether he'd consider hosting the Academy Awards again and he replied: “No way. Lotta fun to have done it, though.”

MacFarlane's edgy comedy proved a polarizing force on Sunday's Academy Awards, with jokes about domestic violence, women's bodies and Jews in Hollywood that offended some viewers. The Oscars did get their biggest audience in three years, however, with particular growth among young viewers.

With azure waters and a long list of big game fishing world records and tropical reef fish to see, it's no wonder author and sportsman Ernest Hemingway spent a decade of winters in the Florida Keys. The Overseas Highway, or U.S. Route 1, strings together more than 50 small islands with a swashbuckling past that rise above an ancient coral reef. Here, whether it's by sailboat or jet ski, riding on the water is the only to get around.

The quirky character of Key West, with its sun-drenched colours and retro '80s motel signs, finds roosters roaming public parks alongside cats and buskers. Here, Hemingway's house is now filled with a brood of 43 felines descended from six-toed Snowball, who belonged to the adventurous author. The house stands across from a 164-year-old lighthouse warning ships and their treasure about the treacherous reef shores. Ride out on the water around the island and round the tip of the southernmost point of the U.S. Spot colourful reef fish while snorkelling and you will see just how important the life aquatic is to the keys.

reasons to visit the Florida Keys

Dry Tortugas (Lower Keys)

Big Pine Key and the lower keys of Dry Tortugas National Park are unspoiled in their beauty. Spanish explorer Juan Ponce de León discovered these islands 500 years ago in 1513. The hundreds of sea turtles he and his men found basking on the shoals gave the islands their name. A high speed ferry or sea plane from Key West will get you to the Tortugas, the most remote of America's National Parks. Just west of the Marquesas Keys are coral reefs where an experienced diver can feel as though they're a character in Finding Nemo.

Big Pine Key, Bahia Honda State Park

Take the road north from Key West and enter miles of leafy mangroves growing around a series of smaller keys that the beloved manatee calls home. From the Overseas Highway, you can see the remains of the historic railroad Standard Oil partner Henry Flagler used to pave a way into the area in 1912. Entering Big Pine Key, look for an endangered white-tailed deer half the size of ones found in Canada. The most natural sandy beaches in the keys are found here, where sea sponges regularly wash up on shore at Bahia Honda State Park.

Marathon, Pigeon Key

Locals give the keys their character and on Marathon, Turtle Hospital founder Richie Moretti, a one-time mechanic, is excited to share his passion for the gentle beasts. You can visit his recovering loggerhead, Ridley and green sea turtle patients, who are then released back into the wild. Pieces of the original Flagler railway that linked the island keys in 1912 come closely into focus travelling to Marathon. Grab some lobster tacos at the Sunset Grille, a tiki bar near the Pigeon Key ferry and sip from their line of kitschy cocktails that come in collectible mugs, including the Magic Marlin and Pina' Pineapple.

Key Largo

Hollywood actor Humphrey Bogart left his mark on the keys when he starred in the film noir gangster flick Key Largo. The story of Bogie holing up in a hotel during a hurricane, only to find it swarming with gangsters, became so popular the area changed its original Spanish name. It was no longer Cayo Largo, the longest key. This area is also known as the diving capital of the world. ## Job hunting. Four tips to fix stale cover letters

TalentEgg.ca

Navigating the world of resumés and cover letters is like trying to do an assignment without any guidelines from your professor.

At school, if you wrote an organized and well-researched paper, you'd get a decent—if not a great—mark.

Job hunting is a different story. Nothing has prepared you for the game of resumés and cover letters. When you don't hear back from employers after applying, it's hard to know what needs improvement.

We recently completed a round of hiring at Influitive, the company I work for. Based on my experience, I'd like to share some resumé and cover letter tips that will help you land your next job interview.

1. Pretend you're on Twitter

If your cover letter was a tweet, what would it say? Get right to the point.

Lose the, "I'm applying for the ABC position at EFG Corporation that was posted on the student careers website of University XYZ."

Writing this sentence on Twitter would be a total waste of characters. Instead, your cover letter should start with your pitch: "I'd be a great fit for the ABC position because XYZ."

2. Ditch the R2-D2 vibe

Write a cover letter the way you would write a blog post—using a human voice.

Read your cover letter out loud. Now read a post from your blog out loud. Notice a difference? Your cover letter is written in a robotic voice that you may think sounds professional. It's not.

You invite employers to check out your blog, yet they won't click the link because they've already seen your writing via your cover letter and, let me tell you, they're not impressed.

3. Lose your laundry lists

Why does your resumé include laundry lists of each daily task you performed for all the jobs you've ever had?

Recruitment experts rant about this resumé problem all the time, yet it came up so often in the round of hiring we just did. According to Andy Porter, HR executive and prominent recruitment blogger, candidates should pitch themselves as accomplishees as opposed to doers. Make achievements the focal point of your resumé and cover letter, and cut the rest out.

4. Stop the resumé firing squad

We all know the drill: modify a few resumé buzzwords, change the company name and job title and fire off multiple applications into cyberspace. Instead, opt for a quality-over-quantity approach by applying to a few positions very well.

On average, employers spend somewhere around 45 seconds reviewing a resumé.

Resumé writing aims to help the employer to effortlessly extract and retain the most vital information. The art of resumé writing consists of successfully transferring the story of your professional life onto one page.

Enter the infographic, a tool that visually represents and simplifies complex data. An infographic resumé is a unique way to condense and quantify the information on your resumé. Not to mention it looks slick, contemporary and really awesome.

Cheryl Ticne, a Vancouver-based information designer and recent BCIT graduate, has developed a template for her own infographic resumé (pictured) and has been testing the efficiency of this tool in the workforce.

Ticne says she chose to try this approach to give employers an instant idea of her skills. With the endless submissions of resumés received by HR departments, the infographic resumé makes it easy to process information quickly in an organized and catchy format.

It took Ticne around three days to come up with the initial design for her resumé. The inspiration comes from other designs combined with her own ideas. "It was quite a process for me to finally have a resumé that presented me very well," she says.

This is a familiar struggle amongst job-seekers. The infographic resumé for Ticne is a perfect example of a unique, relevant, and interesting way to present your skills.

One employer even told her that her resumé was at the top of his pile due to its unique and professional esthetics.

An infographic resumé is not an option limited to those in the field of design or graphics. This format is perfect for individuals who carry a lot of information on their resumé since it helps employers quickly understand exactly what the candidate is about. Incorporating this concept doesn't mean that the entire

- The purpose of these numbers is to provide a visual comparison of information that gives employers a stronger idea of her strengths.

resumé has to be an infographic, either. Simply adding a few images can give your resumé a little something extra. Breaking up the sometimes mundane text can really help prevent you from being lost in the black hole of redundant submissions.

We know all too well the importance of having a perfect resumé. Finding the balance between creativity and professionalism can be the ultimate challenge. Tactics such as adding infographics can be helpful as long as it is in line with the context of the position for which you are applying.

If an employer is only going to spend 45 seconds reviewing your resumé, you better make the seconds count. How you do that is entirely up to you.

How to build an arts portfolio on the cheap

Media. Build a creative folder and get experience using various free tools

SHAHEERAH

While finding an internship in the competitive field of the arts or media can be tough, there are things you can do on your own that will show employers you're not the type to just sit around and wait for things to happen, but rather you like to take action.

The best thing to do when you're studying in a field such as media, architecture or visual arts is to make your very own personalized creative folder that features all your work, which will act as a great tool to take along with you to interviews.

Here are a few ways you can build your portfolio on your own:

Write

Many colleges and universities have their own school newspapers, so try your best to find out how you can become a contributor.

You can often find opportunities to get writing experience outside of school, too.

Blog

Try starting up your own professional blog on free sites such as WordPress or tumblr. Make sure to keep your blog interesting and relevant, and keep up-to-date on the industry you hope to work for (but stay away from blogging on sensitive issues, such as culture, religion and politics, as you don't want to end up offending a reader).

Creative arts

If you are the creative type, I strongly recommend Behance.net. This global online platform will allow you to create and upload your own special creative projects in several areas such as graphic design, typography, animation and motion graphics.

Not only will these do-it-yourself projects help you

Photography

- Equipment. If you love taking photos, invest in or borrow a good quality camera and embark on the endless possibilities to discover the types of digital media you can create.

- Experiment. If you are into event photography, snapping pics at events on your campus is perhaps the best way to develop some skills and experience in that area. Want to practice portraits? Round up friends and offer to take professional photos for their LinkedIn profiles.

gain experience in your field, but they will also help to enlarge your professional network and can provide a source of extra cash.

A taste of what you can do in the food industry — pastries and all

Ever thought of taking your culinary talent to a professional level? It might be just the thing to spice up your career prospects, and there are more options than you may think

careerbear.com

OK, you love to eat. And cook. You think of yourself as something of a foodie and your idea of a good book is one with four-colour food shots and recipes that make your mouth water. Favourite TV shows? Cooking ones, of course.

So why not take all that passion and turn it into a career? There are tons of culinary directions to go in — here are the six hottest ones.

Chef: A chef is a professional cook who prepares, cooks and presents meals. While celebrity chefs are all the rage, there are lots of chef and sous-chef (a chef's assistant) positions in restaurants and hotels as well as hospitals and catering companies.

Pastry chef: A pastry chef specializes in making pastries, desserts, breads and other baked goods. Pastry chefs are specially trained. They work in professional kitchens and are employed by large hotels, bistros, restaurants, bakeries and some cafés. Some pastry chefs can be self-employed.

Caterer: A caterer works closely with clients to develop menus for any event, large or small, like weddings, charity balls, holiday parties and office lunches. The caterer prepares all the food and delivers it to the event. Caterers work long hours and have a flair for presentation and customer service.

Recipe developer: A recipe developer is exactly that — someone who creates recipes. These can be for consumers, magazines, businesses and commercial clients. They're on top of current food and nutrition trends and know how to combine ingredients and cooking styles to appeal to a wide range of tastes. Some specialize in one type of cooking or cooking style.

Food stylist: A food stylist prepares food for photo shoots and makes it look so delicious you're tempted to lick the page.

Stylists work closely with the photographer, using tips and trade secrets to create compelling images (but trust me, you wouldn't be able to eat the food). Most food stylists are self-employed and work in editorial, advertising and packaging.

Product developer: Product developers love food but they also love marketing. In this career, you work on new food products for a manufacturer or retailer from conception through to how the food is made in a commercial kitchen (so big quantities) to helping bring the product to market.

There are tons of culinary directions to go in. With some research, you could discover your dream job. ISTOCK PHOTO

These petite cheesecakes are perfect for one serving and leave none to go to waste.

They can also be ready sooner than a regular-sized cheesecake, since they chill much faster. Baking the cheesecakes in a water bath — a pan filled with water — keeps them moist and prevents them from sinking in the middle.

Serve them with fresh berries or a fruit-based dessert sauce and a dusting of icing sugar. I like to garnish with a drizzle of melted fruit sorbet, such as mango or raspberry.

1. Preheat the oven to 350 F. Line a 12-cup muffin tin with paper muffin liners.

2. Combine the ricotta, cream cheese, sour cream, egg, vanilla, lemon juice, zest, flour and sugar in a food processor and process until smooth and creamy. Divide the mixture among the prepared muffin cups.

3. Set the muffin tin in a larger pan or on a baking sheet with sides. Pour enough hot water into the pan to come one-third to one-half up the sides of the muffin cups.

4. Bake in the centre of the oven for 20 minutes.

5. Remove the muffin tin from the water bath and cool to room temperature on a rack. Chill for 1 hour.

6. To serve, remove the paper liners and place on individual serving plates. Garnish with berries and a sprinkle of icing sugar.

Perfect little bites of velvety goodness with a light, airy frosting are easy to make and enjoy. Garnish these delicious cupcakes with an extra special sprinkle of edible gold flakes or coloured sugar to make them the star of your next special occasion.

1. In a large bowl, whisk together cake and pastry flour, sugar, cocoa powder, baking powder and baking soda; set aside.

2. In another small bowl, whisk together buttermilk, melted butter, egg, food colouring and vanilla. Pour over flour mixture and whisk until smooth and well-combined.

3. Divide batter among greased or paper-lined mini muffin tins and bake in preheated 350 F (180 C) oven for about 15 minutes or until toothpick in centre comes out clean. Remove from pan and let cool completely on rack.

4. Italian Meringue Frosting: In a small saucepan, bring sugar and water to boil, stirring to dissolve sugar. Let mixture boil for 5 minutes.

5. Meanwhile, in a large bowl,

Dessert. Speedy Pear Crisp

Sometimes, even on a week-night, you really crave a little dessert. But making dessert takes time, and you already are spending time cooking up the main event, namely dinner. That's where this recipe comes to the rescue.

1. Heat the oven to 350 F. Lightly coat a shallow 6-cup baking dish with cooking spray.

2. In saucepan over medium-low, heat the preserves until melted and easily stirred.

3. Set the sliced pears in a large bowl, then drizzle the preserves over them. Add the lemon juice and salt, then toss well. Spread the pears evenly in the prepared baking dish.

4. Sprinkle the granola evenly over the pears, then cover the dish loosely with foil and bake 30 minutes. Remove the foil and bake another 15 minutes, or until the pears are tender. Serve hot or cold. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/ SARA MOULTON, AUTHOR OF THREE COOKBOOKS, INCLUDING SARA MOULTON'S EVERYDAY FAMILY DINNERS.

Senators winning their battle with adversity

THE HOCKEY NEWS
Murray Pam
ottawa@metronews.ca

The Ottawa Senators are becoming the NHL's version of Monty Python's Black Knight. You know, the one in the Holy Grail, who has all his limbs severed and insists it's nothing more than a flesh wound?

After losing, in order, vital parts Jared Cowen, Jason Spezza, Peter Regin, Milan Michalek, Erik Karlsson and most recently, goalie Craig Anderson for a few days, no one would blame the Senators if they surrendered. But coach Paul MacLean and his staff are embracing the club's plight by preaching a positive approach. The second-year coach challenged his players with this simple edict: "Be who you are. Bring what you do to the table. Have a great work ethic and we will be fine."

"Fine" isn't the word, more like "sensational." In their first game after Karlsson's injury, the Senators appeared to suffer an emotional letdown at the ACC. They have reeled off five consecutive victories since, including a stunning win that earned the club redemption in the Battle of Ontario rematch.

While many pundits are singing the praises of MacLean, Binghamton coach Luke Richardson deserves a few bouquets of his own. On any given night the Senators have iced a roster with as many as nine players who opened the season in the AHL.

Sens fans have grown accustomed to the blue-line play of names such as Benoit, Borowiecki and Wiercioch. Now you can add six-foot-four, 222-pound specimen Eric Gryba to that list. The Saskatoon native will not be mistaken for Karlsson, but as a replacement provides the club with a physical element comparable to that of Cowen.

Recent callups Dave Dziurzynski and Derek Grant have become role players for MacLean. The undrafted Dziurzynski is filling in capably on the left wing of Zack Smith and Chris Neil, and chipped in with his first NHL goal. Grant has become a key cog on the league's third-ranked, 88 per cent penalty kill.

However, the majority of the credit goes to MacLean, who has the Midas Touch.

Witness the recent benchings of Colin Greening and Mika Zibanejad just over a week ago: Greening has pocketed five points in the past five games, while Zibanejad has three points in four starts. MacLean said the pair required a "reset."

Where the Senators ultimately finish is anyone's guess, but for now MacLean's crew has plenty of bite and is definitely winning their battle with adversity.

The Los Angeles Kings traded Simon Gagne back to the Philadelphia Flyers on Tuesday for a conditional draft pick, sending the struggling left-winger back to the city where he had his greatest NHL success.

Gagne spent his first 10 NHL seasons with the Flyers, but won his first Stanley Cup title last season in Los Angeles after a late-playoff return from a concussion. He hasn't scored a goal in 11 games this season for the Kings, who decided the veteran didn't fit in coach Darryl Sutter's system.

NHL. Kekalainen wants 'quick hockey'

Jarmo Kekalainen was a couple of minutes late for his first news conference as the Columbus Blue Jackets' new general manager.

"I apologize for being a little late," he said sheepishly. "I got lost in the building. Trying to find my way around."

Now the former Ottawa Senators and St. Louis Blues executive is charged with the task of guiding the floundering Blue Jackets from the depths of the NHL.

He has a clear opinion on how he wants to do that.

"I believe in fast hockey. I believe in quick hockey, not only in terms of skating, but thinking and the instincts for the game," he said.

The 46-year-old Kekalainen inherits a Blue Jackets team that has made the playoffs just once in its 11 previous seasons (2008-09) and has never won a post-season game. Columbus had the worst record in the NHL a year ago and is back in the basement again this season.

Romero believes his sinker is key to success

MLB. Jays starter looks to bounce back from roller-coaster 2012

Spring training is like a laboratory for pitchers, and Toronto Blue Jays left-hander Ricky Romero spent his time on the mound Tuesday testing out his sinker.

Teammate Brandon Morrow, using the Internet (brooksbaseball.net) for research, had pointed out that Romero had strayed from his sinker last year — he had thrown it just eight per cent of the time in 2012 against left-handers and 13 per cent against righties, compared to 26 and 21 per cent in 2011.

In all, he used the sinker 11 per cent compared to 22 per cent the previous year.

"Looking at those numbers, they're pretty crazy," said Romero, who has the printout in his locker to prove it.

He's not sure what happened, other than he stopped trusting the two-seamer pitch in what turned out to be a roller-coaster year.

On Tuesday, Romero estimated he threw the sinker 90 to 95 per cent of the time in his first outing of the spring — a 8-4 loss to the Minnesota Twins that dropped Toronto's Grapefruit League record to 2-3.

"(I'm) just trying to get that pitch back and get it under control," said Romero. "But it definitely felt good to be back out there."

Get the sinker back and Romero believes he will "get back to the guy that I was."

Ronaldo and Madrid dominate Barcelona

Cristiano Ronaldo got the better of Lionel Messi on Tuesday, scoring twice to lead Real Madrid to a 3-1 win at Barcelona and a spot in the Copa del Rey final.

After the first leg of their semifinal ended 1-1, Madrid neutralized Barcelona's passing game and counterattacked to perfection at the Camp Nou to hand its archrival its first home loss in any competition since last April.

It was also a second straight cup setback for the Catalan club, which is running away with the Spanish league but lost 2-0 at AC Milan in the first leg of its Champions League last-16 matchup.

While Messi had a quiet night, Ronaldo scored for a sixth straight visit to Camp Nou when he earned and converted a penalty in the 13th minute. Ronaldo hit again on the break in the 57th before Raphael Varane got his second goal of the series in the 68th.

Jordi Alba pulled a late goal back for defending champion Barcelona, but it was much too late to prevent Madrid from going through 4-2 on aggregate.

Madrid will play either Atletico Madrid or Sevilla in the cup final on May 18.

Transmission

Choices include a six-speed manual that uses an MX-5 Miata-inspired short-throw shifter, or optional six-speed automatic. Selecting the former pegs the drivetrain's estimated fuel economy at 8.1 l/100 km in the city and 5.3 on the highway, with the numbers improving to 7.6/5.1 for the automatic.

2014 Mazda6

- Type. Four-door, front-wheel-drive mid-size sedan
- Engine (hp). 2.5-litre DOHC I4 (184)
- Transmissions. Six-speed manual; six-speed automatic
- Base price (incl. destination). $26,200

Engine

SKYACTIV means driving dynamic that's supposed to be closer to what you get in a sports car.

The base engine — in fact the only available powerplant at this point since the V6 is toast — is a 2.5-litre four-cylinder that makes 184 horsepower and 185 pound-feet of torque. The uniqueness of the new four-cylinder is its higher-than-usual 13:1 compression ratio that gives the engine extra punch.

Design

From most angles the Mazda6 is more expressive than the previous version and closely resembles Mazda's Shinari and Takeri concept cars that revealed a new styling direction. The front-end treatment is arguably the best looking in this class, while the rest retains the familiar sweep of the roofline and truncated rear.

Review. The more established members of the mid-size sedan class are in for a shock once they spy this car

MALCOLM GUNN

For Mazda, shaking up the automotive establishment is all in a day's work.

Always the rebel, Mazda has a reputation for going against the grain in product development. The automaker refuses to offer a hybrid powertrain option, which is tantamount to sacrilege. Instead, it pursues internal-combustion-engine refinement under the SKYACTIV label. The 2013 CX-5 wagon was the first all-new Mazda fitted with this technology (direct fuel injection, etc.) and the recently launched third-edition Mazda6 is following suit.

From most angles the Mazda6 is more expressive than the previous version and closely resembles Mazda's Shinari and Takeri concept cars that revealed a new styling direction. The front-end treatment is arguably the best looking in this class, while the rest of the car doesn't stray too far from the past and retains the familiar sweep of the roofline and truncated rear.

The new-design Mazda6 sheet metal is the gift-wrapping that hides considerable technological advancements beneath the skin.

Following its initial launch, Mazda will offer a Volkswagen-challenging 2.2-litre four-cylinder turbo-diesel option that also receives the SKYACTIV appellation. It features lowered engine compression that Mazda says makes it clean burning without any nasty particulates exiting the exhaust.

A recent drive in one of Mazda's test mules confirms that the diesel 2.2 generates plenty of torque, but that it also drives just like a gasoline engine without the usual tell-tale clatter normally associated with diesels. Exact power and torque specs will be released closer to launch.

The base GX model that lists for $26,200, including destination charges, comes with the usual power and comfort ingredients and push-button start. It also comes with a touch-screen display with Bluetooth networking and a rear-view camera.

With its dedicated approach to improving power,

The interior is super clean and nicely detailed, although it doesn't scream "look at me!" as much as the outside.

reducing overall energy consumption and creating a heartbeat-skipping shell, the Mazda6 will generate plenty of look-sees, or at least make buyers seriously ponder this nifty, thrifty sedan.

Revving the five point ... oh!

Autoknow. 420 hp is a great number, but it took a group of Mustang enthusiasts to find it in the 5.0-litre engine

wheelbasemedia.com

Michael Delproposto owns a 1967 Ford Mustang coupe. Brian Armstrong suns himself at high speed in a red 2007 Shelby GT500 convertible. Adam Christian's 1966 Mustang is part way through its resurrection as a fully modernized classic, while Chris Tucker's weapon of choice is a 1983 Mercury Capri, the twin to the Mustang.

These four, and 14 other Mustang owners, form a special club. They're the men and women responsible for Ford's 5.0-litre V8 found in the current Mustang GT.

Who better to put on the project than people who would fabricate the exhaust manifolds at home in the garage? Yes, engineering savvy from rabid Mustang enthusiasts is what's under the hood of your 420-horsepower 2013 Mustang GT, even if the 5.0 is not technically "back" as Ford has been touting since 2010.

As with the Hemi, the only part of the 5.0 that's truly "back" (and from a rather inglorious past, at that) is the name. Even the displacement is different than the previous 5.0-litre engine — which dates back to the late 1960s as the 302 was actually 4.9 litres.

Forty-year-old technology? Back? We certainly hope not. You could take a lot of shots at the 5.0 over the years for its actual lack of performance under the hood of a stock Mustang and even bigger shots at its 4.6-litre successor that always seemed to be a step or two behind Chevrolet and Chrysler.

While the 4.6 proliferated in the late 1990s, a groundswell

As the fender badging points out, Ford began seriously marketing the 302 V8 as litres, but 5.0 is nice, round number. Also round (or flat, perhaps) was its paltry 140 horsepower rating. FORD ARCHIVES of affection for 5.0 kept the old cam-in-block design alive and well and winning all sorts of racing events. In the hands of privateers, the 5.0 actually had something Ford never seemed to give it: power, and lots of it. Fitted with aluminum heads, the 5.0 became a lightweight and potent performer that reached legendary and perhaps even heroic status. The crew here at Wheelbase Media tested a variant of the 5.0 at 482 horsepower and 440 pound-feet of torque (vimeo.com/wheelbase).

Meanwhile, by Ford's own admission, the Mustang's 4.6-litre V8, at 315 horsepower, was outmatched ("By 2007, the Mustang competitive landscape was beginning to change...") at least on paper, and in need of a serious upgrade.

Capitalizing on the original 5.0's post-Ford success and popularity was likely a smart move in launching the new 5.0, especially considering the grand plan.

Enter the 18 members of Ford's 5.0-litre team with a goal of creating more than 400 horsepower. This might seem like a lofty goal considering the 4.6 was 85 horsepower shy of 400 and that the bigger 5.7-litre Chrysler Hemi V8 was in the 370 range and the bigger-still 6.2-litre Camaro V8 was at 426 horsepower. But, what most people didn't know was that Ford had been offering a 420-horsepower 5.0-litre double-overhead Cammer engine through its parts department since 2003.

Listing for about $15,000 US, the Cammer was ready-made proof the power could be made with 5.0 litres of displacement — in this case, a 4.6-litre engine block with a larger bore — but push the clock ahead seven years and fuel economy and durability were major considerations, especially for a high-volume car such as the Mustang.

Team member Todd Brewer, who owns a 1987 5.0-litre Mustang GT, was in charge of double-overhead-cam cylinder-head development of the new 5.0.

"Striking the optimal balance between all of these attributes required us to do all the things we know how to do, only better," he said.

Variable cam timing makes the engine more docile and thrifty when your foot isn't jammed to the floorboard, such as when cruising the freeway or idling at a red light.

Fuel economy, despite the hefty power and torque increase, is at least as good as the previous 4.6. Engine efficiency is one chapter of that story. The Mustang GT with the new 5.0 for 2011 (rated at 412 horsepower for the inaugural year) was claimed to pull down 25 m.p.g. on the highway.

The 5.0 is all aluminum, too, which means it's just 430 pounds, which is 20 per cent lighter than the physically much smaller all-iron 5.0 of old, according to Ford.

How important is diet? Carroll Shelby said at the time, "It might not be as sexy as adding more horsepower or bigger brakes, but shaving pounds off a car is the single smartest move you can make."

Smart? It's enough to make you wonder if the 18 members of the 5.0 team weren't designing the new engine to power their own cars. Then again, maybe they were.

Engine evolution

1 The Cammer

The idea of a 5.0-litre engine with dual overhead camshafts is hardly foreign to Ford since it offered this 420-horsepower 5.0 Cammer in its parts catalogue and showed it between the fenders of a 1965 Mustang back in 2003. The current 5.0 shares little with this engine, however. PHOTO CREDIT: FORD ARCHIVES

2 From the 289

The original 5.0-litre engine was a descendent of the 302-cubic-inch engine from the 1960s. The 302 evolved from the 289 (4.7-litre) engine, pictured here.

3 '80s and '90s

The 5.0-litre engine of the 1980s and '90s wasn't exactly a heavy hitter, but it gained fame in the hands of privateers who successfully raced with it. Here, this 331-cubic-inch engine is derived from a 1994 5.0 and produces 482 horsepower and 440 pound-feet of torque. This is actually a street engine, not a race engine. # It's a pricey ride, even used, so don't cheap out on peace of mind

Second Gear.

2002 to 2012
Mercedes-Benz SL

drive@metronews.ca

Few machines embody world-class comfort, premium sophistication and advanced performance quite like the Mercedes-Benz SL. A two-seat convertible designed for comfortable, high-speed, top-optional travels, it was available in its last full generation from 2002 to 2012.

Feature content for this luxu-rocket included a fully motorized power roof, navigation, heated leather seats with the 'airscarf' neck-warmer system, Bluetooth, premium audio by Harman Kardon, driver-selectable suspension and plenty more.

Common Issues

Complaints tended to deal with noises, like squeaks and rattles, as the car ages. System malfunctions, which are typically referenced by a message in the instrument cluster, are also somewhat well documented. Be sure none of these messages are present on the model you're test-driving.

Listen for a metallic "clanging" sound from the rear of the vehicle as it comes to rest, or while it's resting shortly after being stopped. Numerous owners have reported issues with baffles breaking off inside the fuel tank and floating noisily around. It's a pricey repair.

Ensure the motorized top works as expected, completing several full "open" and "close" cycles and listening for any binding, hesitation or strain. The roof should open smoothly and quietly.

Avoid models with the ABC suspension. This system will eventually wear down and break, resulting in a big repair bill.

Engine

Look for V8 power on most models, with power ranging from 302 to just under 500 horses. Automatic transmissions and rear-wheel drive were fitted to all models.

What owners like

Head-tuning factor, on-road presence and performance were the SL's most highly-rated assets, according to many owners. Plenty of on-board storage and all-around comfort were also commented upon positively. This is a two-seater that's road-trip ready.

What owners dislike

Fuel consumption and maintenance costs were among the most common complaints of the SL.

Verdict

The SL is loved for many things, but low maintenance costs aren't among them. Take any SL you're considering strongly to a Mercedes mechanic for a comprehensive inspection. You're spending big bucks on this car — so don't cheap out on the inspection.

All GM vehicles are getting Internet, now where do we go to the bathroom?

Auto Pilot. A future where all cars are connected sounds great, but will we ever leave our vehicles?

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

Get ready for a future where virtually all vehicles are Internet hot spots.

At a mobility conference in Spain this week, GM announced it will equip virtually all its 2015 models in the United States and Canada with 4G LTE high-speed broadband. Some of those 2015 models should be on sale by mid 2014.

There is a sprinkling of models from other manufacturers, like Mercedes-Benz, and Chrysler, that have 3G-based hot spots. BMW introduced 4G LTE wi-fi to its 7 Series this past year. And of course you can get onto the Internet on many vehicles by syncing your smartphone into their infotainment systems.

But while we have been definitely moving toward this wi-fi future, the GM announcement is a declaration of sorts that Internet hot spots in the majority of vehicles is a fait accompli.

GM said "embedding" or "hard wiring" vehicles with LTE high-speed broadband is a faster and more reliable connection for infotainment offerings.

Otherwise, GM has to rely on whatever good or wonky smartphone technology and coverage that is in the hands of its customers.

Also, with this system, customers don't have to have a smartphone to use the vehicle's connected services, because, well, their vehicle is a smartphone.

And finally, having a vehicle with the capacity to be connected to the World

Extra charges?

The downside

Well, the general nature of face-to-face human contact, nurtured and evolved through millennia, now reversing and degrading to a world where humans only feel comfortable looking at a screen of some sort, might be one.

But say we don't worry about that one, what about your monthly car payments? I'm guessing there will be an extra charge for data services.

Not sure, but my current Internet and cellphone provider seems to operate on such a revenue model.

Another thing: my car already has a better sound system than any in our house. In the future it might also have the best wi-fi.

You can already feed yourself via the drive-thru. You'll never wanna get out of the car. The need for washroom facilities is still there, but maybe they're working on that too.

Wide Web in such a profound way sets up all sorts of fantastic connected scenarios.

GM could update a lot of software wirelessly, and keep their vehicles up-to-date on a whole bunch of parameters, not just infotainment ones.

So yeah, all great. Video streaming movies. People on Facebook or Skype with their i-Pads. Real time traffic updates.

Pulling information from the cloud.

Yada Yada Yada.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

This would be a good day to clarify your ambitions and to let those in positions of power and authority know that unless they offer you something better you will be looking elsewhere. Say it and mean it.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

It's time to get tough with someone who has been taking liberties. Yes, of course, you could blame yourself for allowing the situation to drag on so long but ultimately it's their fault, not yours, so speak up.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

You may need to backtrack a little today if you don't want to fall out with a friend or work colleague. OK, so you believe that what you said was true but did you have to be so sarcastic about it?

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Be honest with loved ones today, even if what you have to tell them is not what they want to hear. If they mean something to you then you must make sure they see the light — for their own good.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

A new health or fitness program could be just what you need to get yourself moving again, physically and mentally. And stick with it this time. It won't be long before you see some seriously encouraging results.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

You may be surprised by what happens today but don't just stand there or you could miss out on an opportunity to benefit from unexpected changes. And don't feel guilty if you gain from someone else's misfortune.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

You may find it hard to turn down a call for assistance but it's necessary. If you don't, you will find yourself doing things for others that they really should be doing for themselves. Don't let them take advantage.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

The planets will give you the courage you require to start something you have been yearning to do for ages. Great changes are taking place all around you but don't be afraid: They are the kind of changes you need.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Don't stop thinking and don't stop looking for ways to improve your position in life. Over the next few days there will be more than one opportunity to make money from sudden events. If you don't then someone else will.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

An idea that pops into your head out of nowhere may be outrageous, but the more you allow yourself to think about it the more you will like it. Some say you are too cautious to take risks. Prove them wrong.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

There are so many changes going on that even the most adventurous of Aquarians may be wondering where it is all going to end. But change never ends — you know that. Make change your friend.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

If you approach a difficult problem from an unusual angle today you may be surprised how simple the answer is. If you are still stuck though you should ask someone you trust.
